Implementation of the Four Principles of Effective Development Co-operation

Country Ownership
Countries set their own national development priorities, and development partners align their support accordingly while using country systems.

Inclusive Partnerships
Development partnerships are inclusive, recognising the different and complementary roles of all actors.

Focus on Results
Development co-operation seeks to achieve measurable results by using country-led results frameworks and monitoring and evaluation systems.

Transparency and Mutual Accountability
Countries and their development partners are accountable to each other and to their respective constituents. They are jointly responsible for ensuring development co-operation information is publicly available.

Agreed by more than 160 countries and international organisations in the Busan Partnership Agreement (2011)

GPEDC was set up to ensure the implementation of the effectiveness principles, among others, through the roll-out of the monitoring exercise.
More than 100 countries have participated in the monitoring exercise, including ASEAN member states and development partners (e.g. Australia, Japan, Germany, South Korea, and USA).
Added Value of the Monitoring Exercise

01 Measuring the Effectiveness
Measuring the effectiveness of development co-operation and showcasing the commitments of development stakeholders in implementing the 'Effectiveness Principles' at the global level.

02 Identification of Challenges
Identifying specific challenges in the implementation of development co-operation.

03 Building Trust
Building trust among the different involved parties through multi-stakeholder dialogues.

04 Formulating Policy Recommendations
Formulating policy recommendations to promote more effective development co-operation by the national government and strategic recommendations to drive collective actions.

Monitoring results should trigger follow-up dialogues, policy update, and further concrete actions.
