Global Partnership
for Effective Development Co-operation

The Global Partnership helps nations, business and organizations work better together to end poverty.

It brings governments, private companies, civil society and organizations together to ensure that aid, time and knowledge produce maximum impact for development.

The Global Partnership is led by Ministers from Indonesia, Nigeria and the United Kingdom. It is a forum for advisors, shared accountability and shared learning to support the implementation of principles that form the foundation of effective development co-operation:

- ownership by developing countries;
- a focus on results;
- inclusive development partnerships;
- transparency and accountability on one another. The principles were endorsed at the fourth High Level Forum on Aid Effectiveness in Busan, Korea in 2011.

The Global Partnership can help guide progress and support the implementation of the global development agenda that will follow the Millennium Development Goals large goal of 2015.

Earthquake can’t shake Haiti’s aid monitoring

Haiti’s online aid database is back on track to show how funds are spent, following disruptions caused by natural disasters.

The External Assistance Management Module (Blyde de Gestion de Aide Externe) is now recording information from more than 250 donors, Civil Society Organizations, development partners and non-state actors. It aims to help improve donor aid funding, in-kind contributions, and projects/programmes funded by the international community.

"We have come a long way from a situation in which the Government hardly had any information on what was in Haiti’s one in which it has detailed knowledge on more than 60 percent of all aid from 2010. The aid database now has 20 partners and 10,383 donors.

In the future, we hope to make the database more effective and more integrated into the country’s national aid management system, said Marc-Antoine Nohot, Director-General of Haiti’s Ministry of Planning and External Co-operation.

The database contains information on projects, contracts, and the implementation of projects, and information on the quality of assistance. The database also provides information on the activities, the number of beneficiaries, and the amount of aid.
